Statement on the November 2020 election results

The following statement can be attributed to Lisa Hershey, Executive Director:

“This year’s election results underscore what we’ve known all along--Californians want affordable homes, health and prosperity for all. That’s why they voted for champions in the White House, in Sacramento and for policies that reflect our values throughout our communities. Look no further than with the passage of initiatives like Measure J in Los Angeles, diverting nearly $1 billion from law enforcement and the legal system to instead re-imagine criminal justice while dedicating significant investment towards affordable/supportive housing and rental assistance.”

“Now it’s up to us to implement the change Californians seek. In 2021, we will work with legislators and stakeholders in Sacramento to help renters struggling the most to stay in their homes, build affordable homes for all who wish to make their place in the Golden State and end homelessness. We will also unveil the Roadmap HOME 2030, a comprehensive framework of bold, evidence-based measures to turn those goals into reality. While Proposition 15 remains too close to call, it’s clear that affordable homes for all remain among the top priorities of voters—and we will meet this moment.”
